Finding Aid for the CHICAGO ARCHITECTURAL PHOTOGRAPHING CO. COLLECTION

Acc No.: xx-012
Future Additions Expected: No
Finding Aid creation: Oct 28, 2010
Size: 1,073 negatives

Abstract

The Chicago Architectural Photographing Co. Collection includes photographic images taken by the firm for architects and builders. The collection includes approximately 1,000 negatives primarily from the 1920s to 1940s of approximately 250 theatres mainly in the Midwest with a few others in other areas of the country. Approximately a quarter are 8x10" glass plate negatives, a quarter are 8x10" film negatives, and half are 4x5" film negatives. Some images may include more than one negative and/or more than one size of negative (i.e. 8x10" and a 4x5" copy negative of the same image). The collection also includes prints made from the negatives (generally 8x10" black and white prints).

Background Information

The Chicago Architectural Photographing Co. was organized in 1885 to serve the demand for architectural photography in the bustling post-fire building boom. Many well-known architects used the services of the company such as Adler & Sullivan, Frank Lloyd Wright, Burnham & Root, etc. The firm survived in its original form until 1973 when the last two principals, Walter Kaszubowski and Paul Broderson, retired due to failing health. Around that time the main collection was offered up for sale. However, the principals would also occasionally sell groups of negatives to various organizations. It was during this time (early 1970s) that Theatre Historical Society acquired the theatre related negatives. The remaining negatives were eventually acquired by a private collector.

Scope and Contents Note

The collection is primarily theatres in the Midwest (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, and Wisconsin). A small portion of the collection includes theatres from Colorado, Kentucky, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, and Tennessee. The negatives contained in the collection are what was available at the time and often are incomplete series. Gaps in the sequence of negatives indicate that these negatives were not relevant to theatres, no longer existed, or were not available for purchase when THS acquired the collection.

The negative numbering system started a few years after the firm was founded. The earliest series started with number 1 and continued to 9999. It then started again at A-1 through A-9999, then B-1 through B-999, and so on through the alphabet. The exceptions to this system were the omission of I, Q, Y and Z. The X series was completed around 1949 and the numbering started again at A-1.

All negatives prior to 1930 were 8x10" glass plate negatives. Over the years many of these were damaged or destroyed during moves and/or as superfluous stock. Additionally, in the 1950s and 1960s the company began a systematic purge of negatives to reduce the stock due to lack of space. Many negatives were discarded or destroyed with only a few representative views kept from each series. The firm had reached the K series before a representative of THS convinced the company to retain the theatre negatives from that point forward. The negatives which remained were purchased by THS in the 1970s and are what comprise THS's Chicago Architectural Photographing Co. Collection.

Some glass plate negatives were already damaged (cracked, broken, missing corners, etc.) or have been damaged over the course of the years. Additionally, the emulsion is starting to warp on some of the 8x10" film negatives. Not all negatives listed in the collection are available for research use or in condition suitable for making photographic prints from negative. Additional views (not listed) may be available in the collection for which THS has only photographic prints and not the negatives.
